

Pre-paid Funeral Plan

Although it's not something that anyone wants to think about funerals are an inevitable expense. Planning ahead now will allow you to protect the people that you leave behind from rising funeral costs and avoid burdening them with the planning.

I've pre-paid for my funeral now to give me and my family peace of mind

I am already saving money to pay for my funeral – why do I need a Funeral Plan?

While it is prudent to include your funeral in your financial planning for the future, the average cost of a funeral has increased by 49% over the last seven years* and rising funeral costs continue to outstrip inflation. Conversely, over the same period, interest rates on savings accounts have dropped, so saving alone may still mean that your family may have to find additional money to cover your funeral expenses.

If you haven't expressed your wishes for your funeral, your family will also have the added burden of arranging everything, at an emotional and stressful time.
